Who Will Be the Lucky 1000?

This month we will produce one thousand HUDSON cars. That is a small percentage of the number of people who will want them, for before a single HUDSON was offered, more than one thousand individuals had paid their deposit to assure getting cars.

The demand in excess of the number we can build has been in about that ratio ever since the first photographs were shown.

Electric Self-Cranking—Electrically Lighted

WHY THIS GREAT DEMAND? People recognize now the importance of engineering brains in their relation to mechanical perfection. Without knowledge a smooth, simple, safe, satisfactory car is impossible.

These cars were designed by 48 skilled engineers gathered from Europe and America, representing 97 factories. They had a hand in building over 200,000 automobiles. These men represent about all that has been learned in motor car design. Some have made the greatest headway of all in designing six-cylinder cars. Some are specialists in other lines. So the combined skill and knowledge of all these men is focused upon the perfection of HUDSON cars.

All who are motor-wise recognize the importance of having a car built under such favorable conditions. That is why, with the maximum of 1,000 cars for delivery this month, only one above. Prices are f. o. b. Detroit.

Over-Night FEDERAL Wireless To the Advertiser

Once more the Greek and Turkish fleets have clashed in battle, the third day of desperate fighting, near the entrance to the Dardanelles, according to a special dispatch received by Lloyds. At the same time the dispatch was sent the warships of the opposing navies were still in action and the results doubtful. The arrival of this battle news at this time, during the progress of the peace negotiations, is supposed to have greatly increased the friction between the Greek and the Turkish envoys attending at St. James Palace. The Balkan envoys today agreed to quit the peace conference en masse if Turkey refuses to surrender Adrianople, which is to be among the first demands. It was decided that the proposed Bulgarian frontier should be the first point considered, including the turning over of Thrace and part of Macedonia to Bulgaria. At the opening of the conference the Turkish envoys protested against the presence of the Greek representatives, on the ground that Greece had not signed the armistice. Reschli Pasha threatened that the Turks would withdraw unless the Greeks left. The other envoys, prevailed upon the Turks to remain in the conference until they communicated with Constantinople and received fresh instructions.

How he acquired possession of alleged correspondence between John D. Archbold, president of the Standard Oil Company, and members of congress, was told yesterday from the witness stand here by William R. Hearst, when the senate committee resumed its probe into campaign contributions. The witness produced photographic copies of some of the published letters, admitting he never saw the original. Hearst said he secured the letters in September, 1908, but hesitated when asked where from. When the committee insisted Hearst said he got the letters from John Eddy, author, who now lives in London. The witness said that his magazine still had copies of letters written by Archbold which had not been published. He handed the photographic copies of some of Archbold's alleged correspondence to Senator Clapp, chairman of the committee, who read several of them to the probers. One of the letters, purporting to be from Senator Penrose, of Pennsylvania, to Archbold, was written in 1903. Another purporting to be from Archbold to Senator Foraker, said, "We are willing to loan you fifty thousand dollars."

Another Archbold letter to Foraker urged that a certain clause "in house bill 500 be stricken out." The committee demanded that Hearst produce the correspondence not yet published. He at first declined, then agreed to submit the letters if the committee would consider them in secret session. Hearst was cross-examined by Senator Oliver, of Pennsylvania. He denied he paid for the letters and photographs, but was unable to say how they were obtained from Standard Oil files.

Another letter written to Governor Wilson threatening him with death if he fails to deposit money in a designated place, was received recently by his secretaries. It was unsigned and was mailed in New York, December 12. This became known here today at the arraignment of Warren and Jacob Dunn, brothers, and Helley Davenport, of Wharton, New Jersey, arrested recently by postoffice inspectors charged with sending threatening letters to the President-elect.

Emphatic denial of everything of an incriminating nature was voiced by J. J. Butler, of Indianapolis, one of the defendants in the so-called dynamite conspiracy trial progressing here. Sections of Butler's letters to John McNamara were read and the witness gave an innocent explanation to every reference contained in them.
